SUNDAY, JANUARY 26th, 2025: SUNDAY AFTER THEOPHANY

Epistle: Ephesians 4:7-13 Gospel: Matthew 4:12-17 Troparia: p 123-4

*ON THIS SUNDAY AFTER THEOPHANY, we read from the Gospel of Matthew concerning the beginning of Christ's earthly ministry at the Sea of Galilee, where He will go on to call His first disciples. The Evangelist Matthew quotes the Prophet Isaiah when he says "The land of Zebulun and the land of Naphtali, by the way of the sea, beyond the Jordan, Galilee of the Gentiles: The people who sat in darkness have seen a great light, and upon those who sat in the region and shadow of death, Light has dawned." (Isaiah 9:1-2) The prophet was speaking of that land of two of the children of Jacob, Zebulun & Naphtali, who each owned the land around the Sea of Galilee, which also contained also the city of Nazareth, where our Lord grew. He foretold that a "great light" would dawn there, to a people who "sat in darkness." Our Lord is our light and our salvation, Who comes to us in the darkness of our sin. O Lord, save us!

OFFICIAL NOTICE
PROPOSAL FOR DISCUSSION
ANNUAL MEETING OF THE ST. NICHOLAS CHURCH
LOCATED AT 288 EAST 10TH STREET
NEW YORK, NEW YORK 10009

The Board of Trustees and Officers of St. Nicholas of Myra Orthodox Church are submitting the following proposal for discussion at the annual meeting to be held on Sunday, February 9, 2025.

Proposal:

The Board, Officers and 100th Anniversary Committee have been preparing for our centennial celebration in November. At a recent meeting, a suggestion was made to clean the stain glass windows within the church proper. After considerable discussion, the board agreed to solicit quotes from companies who specifically perform church stain glass window repair, maintenance and restoration in the New York City vicinity. We received and evaluated several quotes before agreeing to present to the parish a proposal to clean and repair the 4 large stain glass windows and two smaller windows above the altar boy room and sacristy. The New Jersey based company who provided this proposal gave us a quote of $13,159.

The Board and Officers are prepared to discuss this proposal in more detail and answer questions at the annual meeting. If the proposal proceeds to a parish vote and receives approval, the work would be completed prior to our 100th anniversary celebration.

Respectively Submitted,

Robert Zizik

GLOBALIZATION & RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE: WHAT IS ASKED FROM ORTHODOXY?

By +Archbishop Anastasios of Albania, Facing the World: Orthodox Christian Essays on Global Concerns

The Orthodox Church should certainly not allow itself to be misled by the allure of (the church of) Rome, rushing to pronounce judgment on every issue that arises, prescribing detailed solutions. This is work for specialists who do research in the political and social sciences.

The great thing that is sought from the Church remains the spiritual rebirth of the human race, salvation in Christ, the giving of meaning to life. In this way, the Church offers what is most important: it cultivates consciousness and shapes the personalities of people who, by leading responsible lives, can strengthen and revitalize society's immune system. What we need most in the modern era are people with character, vision, and tenacity; people with love that is not hypocritical; people who oppose self-centeredness - whether it be individual, national, or racial. Arrogance, lust for power, and hypocrisy are not only characteristic of large and powerful states, but lurk in the souls of us all.

The Church cannot be a member of the club of the rich and powerful. The strength of Orthodoxy has never identified itself with or relied on the exercise of worldly power. Dostoevsky's famous portrayal of the Grand Inquisitor clearly delineates the great temptation of worldly power that the West encountered, a temptation that was not unknown in the East.

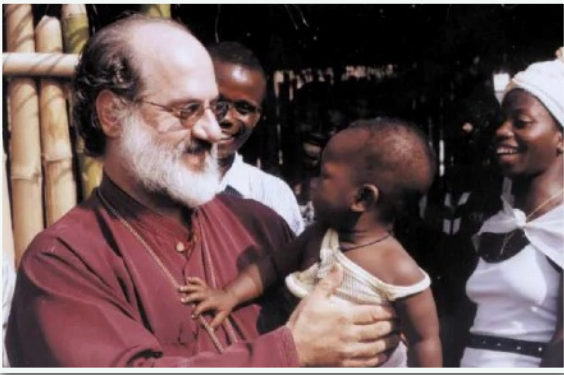

The Church should take an unremittingly prophetic and critical stand against every form of callousness toward human misery. It does this by sacrificing itself in the performance of its ministry; by summoning people to constant, conscientious repentance; by constantly participating in efforts to achieve justice and peace; and by leading a simple, ascetic, and self-restrained existence. The Beatitudes, as Christ formulated them in the Sermon on the Mount, define the authentic ethos of the Church. The goal of Orthodox Christian life is still to acquire the Holy Spirit in our lives.

Moreover, this goal has a direct effect on human relationships at local and global levels, because "the fruit of the Spirit" does not mean taking some voyage into the extraterrestrial realm, but "love, joy, peace, patience, kindness, goodness, faithfulness, gentleness, self-control" (Gal 5:22); it means transcending human aggressiveness and social conflicts and achieving harmony in relationships among human beings and between entire peoples.

By encouraging this sense of universality, the Church not only helps bring people together but also proclaims - both symbolically and in practice - a worldwide communion of love. The Church offers us a foretaste of this global society or communion (the Greek word 'koinonia' has both meanings) in the form of an eschatological hope, a vision, and a celebration. Let anyone take part who wishes to do so. The Church does not forcibly impose this on anyone, but proclaims it through the lives of the faithful. The kingdom of God "has come and is coming." This "event" has been experienced in the lives of the saints - both well-known saints and those we have never learned about - and it provides prophetic solace regarding the possibilities that the future holds for the human race.

What makes the Church different from any other religious system is that it offers us an actual relationship with the living God through the power and the grace of the eucharistic community. "For God is at work in you, both to will and to work for his good pleasure" (Philippians 2:13). The world is not in our hands, but in his. We proceed with a realistic outlook along the path our lives have taken, bearing our cross and looking forward to the Resurrection. "But according to his promise we wait for new heavens and a new earth in which righteousness dwells" (2 Peter 3:13). These words pinpoint the specific distinction that makes Christianity's global vision essentially different from every other form of globalization.

Christ assumed all of humanity's nature and renewed it. Any and all who truly believe in him and conscientiously participate in divine worship return to their daily lives ready to fulfill their obligations in their local surroundings by aspiring to a vision that is global.

His Beatitude Archbishop Anastasios (95 yrs) arrived in Albania after the fall of Communism with the words "Christ is Risen!" He was a representative bishop of the Ecumenical Patriarchate to see what could be done to support the needs of the people there, with the intention of returning to his missionary work in Africa. The people fell so in love with him and his witness for Christ, they would not allow him to leave. After his decision to remain, the Church of Albania saw only growth in love, ministry, and faith in God. There are no Orthodox missionary efforts, new or old, in the world untouched by his tireless work and impact. He entered critical care on January 3rd and remained in the hospital's care ever since. May God keep the beloved Archbishop Anastasios in His care, now and ever and unto the ages of ages!
